

The Mixtecs believed that before the sun shone, while the earth was still covered with water, a god and goddess existed in the heavens. Both of them had the calendaric name One Deer. The god was named also Lion Snake, and the goddess Tiger Snake.

from:

The Mixtec and Zoquec Cultures

by Alfonso CASO

1962: <sup>Boletín de</sup> Estudios Oaxaqueños. N° 22

Camaxtle: Gott der Vexotzina

" god of Tlaxcala (for Xipe)
" → Xipe / the red Tezcaltlipoca
Vothr j. 181, 185

camax-xochitl "mural Blume"
Schmeichellei

Seler: Hirse
Borgia p. . . .

Handwritten text at the top of the page, possibly a title or page number.

The mixture is given that before the sun there, when the soil was still covered with water, and the ground and quagmires existed in the present. But if there had been the water, the water would have been there.

Year <sup>1970</sup> of moon: JES Th. p. 369

The mixture is given that before the sun there, when the soil was still covered with water, and the ground and quagmires existed in the present. But if there had been the water, the water would have been there.

Handwritten notes in the lower middle section, including the word "Growth" and other illegible text.

Handwritten notes at the bottom right corner, including the word "Year" and other illegible text.